

In an empty room I sit.
reflecting on the work.

Sometimes its like a tomb but one day it will be a womb For now I rhyme. and toil and ever push along.

I think about my mom and her fight to belong in this world she tried but eventually she died you would think I cried instead she said "go on"

I move forward like most fighting the ghosts.

I lead with love
live with all my heart or at least I try sometimes I worry I am a beast a lion that roars, and also scares.

All I pray is that they know I care Perhaps I am like a storm one that ebbs and flows or that tide that comes & goes Maybe even I am like many things a Frankenstein by design Parts from the best stitched together and dressed but with the best comes the worst, a darkness I despise.
It spies and plots rotting my mind.
In these empty rooms I wait for my time to come.