

The woes of the wanderer are many and few

After all
we get life with a view over mountains, through muck under water over clouds our adventures are countless but sometimes we join the crowds for connection or kindness longing or lust
it is rare times that we get so recharging is a must

The highs and hellos
smiles and hugs
are bittersweet
and feel like drugs

For awhile we float,
just like the rest
a beautiful memory created but the world nags like a pest

Movement begins
A slow roll at first and it doesn't come alone Loss to be nursed
as new friends ask for your phone

new place, old pain same ache, new take
and it all begins again.
