

Trauma and pain are called many things but in the end it's in vain
A dark seeping poison for which light is ~~above~~

Without healing it stacks like a pile on top
Forcing you further and further down into the depths Floating and falling, writhing as you drop
Screaming or sobbing pleading for many deaths

Over and over, endless it seems
Is the light even real if this is the dark?
Still harder it will get ripping the seams of your reality and leaving a mark

This cycle continues forever and always Pain begets pain again and again
It is an easy trap, but what if there were other ^{ways}
So if I may, a moment please, a break in the rain

What if there was no weight? Only weightlessness
A flowing, fantastic feeling of a full cup
Where love begets love