

unwanted, cast aside overlooked, taken out with the tide
To me a diamond, to them just rough
There was a narrative 'No way he's tough'

A battle in my mind against shaming of a tyrannical kind You are weak, unable your life invalid
They seemed to say, a haunting ballad

This was real in actions and words Lock me away, you're worthless they say, less than 2/3
You're not enough, they turn their back Alone I was against these attacks

So I could have built this man upon pillars of sand, stayed a fan But I chose different. You see, who I am is stone, layed piece by piece, no Gam.
Built from the ashes, bred in the darkness Alone I have worked so thank that for the ^{starkness}

Every muscle, every piece of my brain deliberate and chosen with the fuel of pain Whether you have known this game or not know this, I am James and I have fought I do not settle or decide it's enough
I make it so even if it may seem rough
So you may choose a side world
But I do not go with the tide