

Sitting beneath the skies
A wind whistling through white pines
Searching for stillness in self
Is a process of meandering through your mind

Find peace in fierce places and breathe deep as reality moves around you
A calm so true it calls to others hearts
Like the fading hue of the sun against the sky blue

Slow as the world speeds, smooth
Slide with grace through life and avoid the rat race Instead of looking out, look in Kind of like the patience it takes to hook trout and the moves the greats of the past took then.

Imagine the water lapping softly on the shore
Sleeping babies unmoving in their slumber
There is no rush to get anywhere because everything you need is here

Find gratitude and break the want for more
After all, that is what leaves people poor
Your heart is bigger, to everything it is the door Stillness in self that is what the journey is for
