

Greatness - Silent operation

There is something extraordinary about excellence an energy that echoes through actions.
Those that know join into a flow with singular focus, one goal.... go

In many ways there are patterns across disciplines honed in practice, each and everyone decides 'attack this' Comms are clear and quick, eventually not at all a silent smooth operation perfectly executed if there is a fall it becomes a roll, in the end they stand tall

Aside from actual actions there is an air that greatness gives. Some arrogance, some calm, some hunger It brings and beckons for challenge inviting difficulty with no worry of result

There is an efficiency of energy, of steps set out These combinations of sharpened skills stack into singular individuals who show up when times get tough

Interestingly the great people are often missed Others so far from excellence or ensnared in the wrong games they forget when it's easy who got them there other times weakness like jealousy battles the strength of the greats

Regardless the pursuit of perfection is this: Practice until you cannot get it wrong. Excellence is purely a result of perfectly practiced reps
So if you want to be great, dive into the depths