

Tomorrow I turn 24

That too must be symbolic for something.
At least it is a fore that times score is unsettled
A message to say 'Live Now', the fininity of life apparent

Two arms, Two Legs, Two Eyes, Two Ears No fears, but regret Four parts of my heart pumping strong, to carry me along towards a day I do not fret.

That way, when I die I will know I have tried to fly high.
As I reflect on this last year I feel I have given much of myself to others. Even now I sit in the hospital I have lived in for the last 120 hours, I know in this last run around the sun I have not cowered from difficulty & it is clear I have begun to create I have not waited until it's too late, I have said yes to sailing many seas without having a boat. and then figured it out.
with rigor and grit I have climbed my way up mountains.

In some ways I've been a yes man, which leads one to no mans land.
In others I have grown from a boy to a man, an ability to say
'I disagree', or to challenge the status quo.
I have spent much of the year alone, with no home working towards a time where I am more grown, stacking experiences of insanity that may one day help me find my own throne.

Now as my internal compass emerges I will heed its call to a world enthralled by my synchronicity with it. I will obsess & build around things I like, solving problems I know and my aura will glow. I am just a man, but a man who can.