

In this week of solitude

My eyes have raised to the horizon

I see that dark clouds and lightning are beginning to collude As predicted today is now the sci-fi, a singularity of known human history. There is a supersonic tsunami headed towards us, but egos have come to play. This hesitancy sure to make us pay. However I must stand fast that there is a way to be okay.

So as I look towards this speeding storm that looms I think to my loved ones, and prepare myself for the thunder booms. I feel in my core that there is much in store for these next four years.

It is in these existential moments that I know over what I will shed tears. I learn my fears and what I hold dear. Crazy that I have so few peers in this.

What I know I must do is write here that it is time to hold love & light near. Understand how to pursue a view even while in the dark.